

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
March 20, 2007

Contact: Michael Lindemann
970-416-8700

EARTHWORKS EXPO 2007 COMES TO DENVER, ADVANCES 'GO GREEN' BUZZ

DENVER, COLO. – This summer, Colorado residents have the opportunity to join the evolution to a truly sustainable society at EarthWorks Expo 2007. Highlighting topics of renewable energy, green transportation, green building, sustainable agriculture, resource conservation and relocalization, EarthWorks Expo is a large-scale community-based educational and motivational forum that aims to engage the public in community partnerships that will foster public involvement toward environmental awareness and sustainability as societal values.

The 3-day Expo, which is scheduled for July 27-29 at the Denver Merchandise Mart, will include several dozen workshops, numerous exhibit booths by green businesses and sustainability-focused organizations, and presentations by six acclaimed keynote speakers. A Gala Reception will be held Saturday, July 28 featuring celebrity guests, opportunities for attendees to meet the keynote speakers and entertainment by acclaimed guitarist and world music performer, Dave Beegle and Friends.

EarthWorks Expo 2007 will be headlined by internationally renowned sustainability thought leaders, providing real-world solutions that focus on how individuals and society as a whole can live more harmoniously with nature to ensure a sustainable balance between present needs and long-term preservation of natural resources, biodiversity and ecosystem vitality. Confirmed keynote speakers include Frances Moore Lappé, David Johnston, Dr. James E. Hansen, Dr. Elisabet Sahtouris, Richard Heinberg and L. Hunter Lovins.

Michael Lindemann, organizer of the event, believes that EarthWorks Expo 2007 will inspire community members to advance the “go green” buzz sweeping the nation. “EarthWorks Expo is a means for our diverse community members that share similar environmental values to create a framework for ongoing partnerships in sustainability and environmental activism,” says Lindemann. “EarthWorks Expo is a celebration of solutions and an educational and motivational forum that emphasizes how local and global challenges to environmental security can be addressed and mitigated.”

EarthWorks Expo 2007 will be held July 27-29, in the Expo Building of the Denver Merchandise Mart. Tickets go on sale in mid-April and can be purchased online, by phone or by mail. Advance-sale ticket prices range from $7 - $25 for individual tickets, with family, youth, senior and group discounts available. To learn more about EarthWorks Expo, including sponsorship and exhibitor opportunities, contact Michael Lindemann at 970-416-8700 or visit www.EarthWorks2007.com.

###